About the Course

Overall Goal

Local and intercommunal conflicts are a significant cause of violence at the sub-national level. They can take many forms, but the primary driver is always competition for power and resources. Effectively addressing local and intercommunal conflicts is critical to ensuring the protection of civilians as well as sustaining national political processes.

The objective of the course is to develop a deeper understanding of ways to prevent, mitigate and resolve local and intercommunal conflicts, and to enhance specific knowledge and skills in conflict analysis, negotiation, facilitation and mediation, which could be successfully applied in emerging and ongoing conflict situations.

Particular attention will be paid to the aspect of culture, religion, ethnicity and identity, with a view to enhancing the necessary skills to establish and maintain an effective dialogue.

A special focus will be placed on ways of building rapport and engaging non-state armed groups and unarmed actors, as well as on internal and external coordination and cooperation.

Learning Objectives

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Identify and understand various local and intercommunal conflict resolution mechanisms;
- Apply acquired skills in local and intercommunal conflict analysis, conflict monitoring and stakeholders mapping by using relevant tools and techniques;
- Better understand drivers, actors and dynamics of local and intercommunal conflict, and identify historic, structural and proximate causes of conflict;
- Apply a range of skills, techniques and good practices in negotiation, dialogue, facilitation and mediation;
- Develop mediation strategies and inclusive mediation processes and use various modalities for greater inclusion and meaningful participation of women;
- Understand and apply concepts of BATNA (Best Alternative to a Negotiated Agreement) and ZOPA (Zone of Possible Agreement);
- Design, facilitate and run mediation processes;
- Deal with moral and legal dilemmas which may arise in conflict resolution and mediation.
